Dear President Koffler:

I am extremely pleased to share with you, our graduates, our students, and faculty some of the accomplishments during the past year in the College of Law. Because of the great progress which has been made in recent years, it is fair to say that the University of Arizona College of Law can properly be ranked with some of the finest schools in the country. This report will show the high quality of the College of Law program as well as the outstanding potential for the future.

AN OVERVIEW OF THE YEAR

The academic year 1985-86 was an excellent year for the College of Law. While schools across the country have seen minor increases in application pools, or even substantial decreases, we are currently receiving more than 1,000 applicants from students representing more than 60 undergraduate institutions for our first year class. The current first year class is made up of approximately 165 students with a wide variety of backgrounds.

The College of Law faculty continues to excel in classroom instruction, scholarship, and public service. The remainder of this report will show the extraordinary work being done in these three areas by our colleagues.

The practicing bar and the College of Law have traditionally had close ties. During the past year numerous events and activities throughout the country took place for the purpose of strengthening these ties even further.

The past academic year was a fine one. I turn now to a review of that year.

ACTIVITIES AND PROGRAMS

A number of innovative classroom approaches during the past year highlighted progress in the academic program. For the first time, second and third year students assisted full professors in coordinating the first year legal research and writing program. In addition, Professor David Wexler and Professor Bruce Sales co-taught, for the first time, a joint interdisciplinary course dealing with social sciences and the law. Also, Professor Kenney Hegland continued his highly successful course in Law and Literature exploring numerous books throughout the year with students and faculty. Once again we were extremely fortunate to have many outstanding visitors to the College. President Benno Schmidt, of Yale University, delivered the annual Marks Lecture in the spring. Visiting campus as scholars-in-residence were Professors Victor Rosenblum of Northwestern, Phillip Johnson of Berkeley, Marjorie Fine-Knowles of Alabama, H.G. Prince of Hastings, Marvin Wolfgang of Pennsylvania, Vivian and Curtis Berger of Columbia, Judge Delford Leslie of the Hopi Tribal Court, and Israeli Professors Amos Shapira and Frances Raday. Finally, the second year moot court competition was judged by the Honorable Carl McGowan of the United States Circuit Court for the District of Columbia Circuit, Judge Mary Schroeder of the United States District Court for the Ninth Circuit, and former Dean and Professor of Law Joseph Livermore of the Arizona Court of Appeals.

The International and Comparative Law program at the College of Law continues to be strengthened. The Journal of International and Comparative Law successfully completed another year dealing generally with international and comparative law issues and specifically emphasizing Mexico and Latin America. The formal agreement with the Law School of National University of Mexico in Mexico City (UNAM) was signed and during the coming year the initial exchange of faculty and students will begin.

Special mention should be made of the exciting changes at the College of Law in the area of Law and Technology. Under the outstanding leadership of Professor William Boyd, various programs have been developed so that students and faculty can work in this area using new computer equipment recently purchased for the school. Professor Boyd is one of the acknowledged national leaders in this important area and continues to share his work with his colleagues and students.

STUDENT BODY

Students at the College of Law continue to distinguish themselves in a host of different areas both during law school and upon graduation. Placement Director Sallie Lash has done an extraordinary job in securing employment during law school and upon graduation for our students. More than 90 employers visited campus this year conducting well more than 1,000 student interviews. Our students took jobs in a host of areas with a majority going into private practice, but a significant number taking judicial clerkships. Our students remain principally in the state of Arizona, but many located throughout the United States.

Many law students at the University of Arizona continue to excel in a number of academic programs such as the Trial Advocacy and Client Counseling competitions, the second year Moot Court program, the Journal of International Comparative Law, and the Arizona Law Review.

The quality of the students at the University of Arizona College of Law continues to be quite high. The entering class this year was unusually large. Though the goal of the College was to admit 150 students, approximately 165 students are members of our first year class representing more than 60 undergraduate institutions. The student body is far more diverse than ever with the median age of our first year class being 30 years old, about 10% of these first year students being minority students, and approximately 42% of the class being women law students.
The Law Library collection now contains 228,254 volumes and the Library continues to be one of the best academic law libraries in the West. It has a high quality collection that includes the basic legal publications necessary to support the curriculum and research of the College of Law. The collection has needed enrichment in scholarly and historical materials, and this year a strong effort has been made to add these materials within the confines of the budget. The number of new titles or new treatises and textbooks added to the collection this year increased 63% over the number added last year. The addition of this many new titles is an important step in the enrichment of the collection.

The amount of information available through computer-assisted legal research continues to grow rapidly. The two systems available commercially are LEXIS and WESTLAW. LEXIS has been available in our Library since 1981 and WESTLAW since 1983. The presence of both systems assures that our students receive proper training as they join law firms having either or both of them. We were one of the first law libraries to offer training on both systems using a Temporary Learning Center. WESTLAW and LEXIS each installed an additional six terminals for training programs. All first year students were trained on each, and all second and third year students were offered advanced training.

The importance of automation has not been overlooked by the Law Library. The entire Library staff met for a one-day retreat to consider the application of automation in the Law Library. Plans for the future of automation have been made and when funding is available, the Library will proceed to automate the serials check-in, acquisitions and bookkeeping systems and, eventually an on-line catalog. This year Geac, the on-line circulation system used by the University Library, was added. It is not currently being used as a circulation system in the Law Library, but rather to provide access for Law Library users to the University Library materials. The Law Library has used O.C.L.C., an on-line cataloging system, since 1980. We have now acquired a new M-300 O.C.L.C. terminal which will give us increased hardware flexibility and will allow usage of software which will result in more efficient cataloging and classification of new books.

The budget for books and other library materials increased nearly 20% this academic year and yet it did not make up for the inflation experienced over the last five years and the increase in the number of publications required. Fortunately the Library received gifts this year which allowed the purchase of much-needed materials that it would not have otherwise been able to acquire. The Library received many gifts this year from many sources including lawyers, law firms, corporations and individuals. We are very grateful to these donors.

The greatest asset of the Law Library is the Library staff who provide exceptional services to faculty, students, the bench and bar, and other Library users. The Library continues to make a major commitment to improve the services it provides. Professional reference service is available throughout the business day and for an additional sixteen hours per week in the evenings and five hours on Saturday. A new office has been constructed for the Reference Librarians to make them more accessible for library users. Carol Elliott, Reference Librarian, spent the Spring Semester on Sabbatical leave at Harvard Law School studying, in part, how reference service is provided there. The Library staff has been active in local, regional, or national organizations, or all three. All have served on committees. Many have given presentations to various groups, such as Arturo Torres, Reference Librarian, who gave a talk on reference service in academic libraries at the Phoenix Association of Law Libraries meeting. Two members of the Library staff attended and participated in the American Association of Law Libraries Annual Meeting in New York, and one attended the Southwestern Association of Law Libraries in Waco, Texas.

The Library has continued its publishing program with its Law Library Newsletter and Bibliography Series. The Bibliography Series included the following bibliographies: Selective Bibliography on Immigration Law, Arizona Practice Materials, 2d, and a Selected Bibliography of Multivolume Treatise Sets.

RELATIONS WITH THE BAR

Faculty members of the College of Law work closely with the members of the bar. Such work ranges from participation on commissions and committees, providing consulting assistance to lawyers, and meeting generally with lawyers throughout the United States.

Last year I discussed in some detail in this report the progress which had been made in connection with the chief fund raising organization for the Law School, the Law College Association. I indicated that I and members of the faculty had visited graduates of this College throughout the United States and had numerous such meetings throughout the state of Arizona.

The fund raising efforts taken on behalf of the Law College Association were even more successful this year than in the past. The funds received by the University of Arizona Law College Association this year were more than $250,000, an increase of over 500% during the past three years. In addition, the support given to the College through the University of Arizona Foundation also rose substantially.

The significant funds raised through the Law College Association and the Foundation provide great aid to the College of Law. These funds support research assistance for faculty, library acquisitions, student work study and financial aid, scholarship funds, computer programming equipment, and other important purposes.

Particular mention should be made of the Board of Visitors of the University of Arizona College of Law. This Board is made up of outstanding lawyers, judges and law professors from throughout the United States. During the fall these individuals visited the College and participated in a program with other lawyers addressing the needs of the legal profession for the 1980's. They met with a large number of students and explored the various aspects of practice for our student body.

The convocation ceremony in May was one of our highlights. Most of the faculty and third year class, joined by approximately 1,000 guests, participated in the afternoon ceremony held at the Centennial Auditorium. An outstanding commencement address was given by the Honorable Stanley Feldman of the Arizona Supreme Court.
The short reports which follow describe the activities of an excellent law faculty during the past year. I continue to believe that the quality of the faculty will, ultimately, determine the quality of the College of Law. This school had a number of opportunities during the past year for adding new faculty members. Competing with some of the best law schools in the country, we set out to fill five positions at the College of Law. Five offers were made, these five offers were all accepted. Our Faculty/Student Recruitment Committee, chaired by Rosenstiel Distinguished Professor of Law John Strong, did a fine job in selecting and actively recruiting five excellent individuals. Barbara Atwood, graduate of the University of Arizona and member of the University of Houston faculty will be teaching in the family law and procedure areas; Gary Born, a graduate of the University of Pennsylvania Law School and former Clerk for Justice Rehnquist, will be teaching in the International and Constitutional Law areas; Ted Schneyer, one of the major figures in American legal education in the fields of Professional Responsibility and Torts, joins us from the University of Wisconsin; Jane Silverman was formerly with one of the major Wall Street law firms and she will be teaching in the Labor Law and Corporations areas. Our first Marks Visiting Professor of Law will be Robert Williams of the University of Wisconsin, one of the acknowledged experts in the United States in the area of Indian Law.

I wish, once again, to acknowledge your significant and outstanding support of the College of Law faculty. You have continued to provide funds for research for the faculty which has resulted in important scholarly activities.

Both you and the Provost have provided significant sums to the College in order to upgrade the salary scale at the College of Law. Nevertheless, such support must be continued and indeed upgraded if we are able to continue to compete with some of the finest schools in the country.

I believe that the reports following will give you, the graduates, and the students of the College of Law considerable pride in the University of Arizona College of Law faculty.

Best regards,

Paul Marcus,
Dean and Professor of Law
During the 1985-86 academic year Professor Arthur W. Andrews was designated as the first recipient of the Streich, Lang, Weeks & Cardon Faculty Summer Research Grant for Summer 1986. He will be continuing his research and writing on the topic of the defense of equitable recoupment as a method of avoiding the statute of limitations in federal tax controversies.

In addition to his normal, full-time, teaching duties, Professor Andrews served as an elected member of the Dean's Advisory Committee as well as a member of the Law Faculty Status Committee. He was also appointed to the Law College's ad hoc Committee on Academic Policies which will be reviewing the curriculum and related matters during the next academic year.

Professor Andrews attended the annual convention of the Association of American Law Schools in New Orleans in January, 1986 and there participated in the activities of the AALS Section on Taxation. He will be on sabbatical during the Fall Semester, 1986-87, during which he will be engaged in tax research and attending seminars and programs dealing with the current tax reform proposals.

Professor Andrews also received the "Professor of the Year" Award from the Student Bar Association of the Law College.

Professor Charles A. Ares spent most of the year serving as chairman of a large (23 person) Arizona Supreme Court Committee to study the Contingent Fee System. Assisted by two second year students at the College of Law, Mary J. Ryan and Janel A. Hill, the Committee reviewed the role of the contingent fee in the legal system, appraised the alleged abuses of it and made a number of recommendations to the Court for its improvement and further regulation. Most importantly, the Committee recommended that data be systematically collected and analyzed so as to provide a firm basis for rational judgments about the system. The Committee's recommendations are currently pending before the Supreme Court.

During the year, Professor Ares also served on the Dean's Advisory Committee, the Executive Committee, judged several moot court arguments, and was a member of the board of the Chester A. Smith Scholarship Fund, the Arizona Law Review Association Loan Committee, a screening committee for candidates to be legal advisor to the Tucson Unified School District. He was also the principal speaker at the dedication of the James A. Walsh United States Courthouse and spoke at the Maricopa County Bar Association Awards Dinner honoring the public service of the Udall family. At present, Professor Ares is a member of a continuing committee on Academic Policy, a committee engaged in a study of the present and future of legal education at the University of Arizona.

Professor Mark Ascher continued his research in the area of estate planning. His article, "The Fiduciary Duty to Minimize Taxes," was published in the Summer 1985 issue of the Real Property, Probate & Trust Journal. Another article, entitled, "When to Ignore Grantor Trusts: The Precedents, A Proposal, and A Prediction," has been accepted for publication in the Tax Law Review, the nation's preeminent tax journal.
Professor Ascher taught courses in Estates and Trusts, Estate & Gift Tax, Income Taxation of Trusts and Estates, and a seminar in Federal Tax Problems.
Professor Ascher serves on the Board of Directors of the Southern Arizona Estate Planning Council. He is also a member of the American Bar Association Committee on Tax Legislation and Regulations: Income Taxation of Trusts and Estates.
This summer Professor Ascher will be a visiting professor at the University of Texas School of Law, where he will teach an eight-week course on Wills and Estates.

Professor William E. Boyd continues his investigation of the application of computers and computer technology in law and legal education. He has developed a rudimentary "expert system," i.e., a computer system that captures the analytical ability of an expert and makes it available to non-expert users. The system is designed to assist lawyers in analyzing problems arising under the Uniform Commercial Code. Future efforts will be directed to increasing the power of the system and improving its interface to make the system more user friendly.

Professor Boyd’s efforts at using computers in teaching include a computerized simulation of a business failure involving a reorganization under the federal bankruptcy law. Students are assigned the roles of attorneys for the debtor and creditors and must apply the complex legal rules they encounter in the classroom only in abstract form. Professor Boyd is presently adapting to instructional use a computer program for drafting legal documents which he authored some years ago. Last summer, Professor Boyd addressed an international conference in Glasgow, Scotland on the role of computer-assisted instruction in legal education of the future. His paper will be published as part of the proceedings of that conference by a British publisher.

He has continued his work for and on behalf of Native Americans. He is a member of the President’s American Indian Advisory Committee, a member of the Board of Directors of Papago Legal Services, and is a principal consultant to an Arid Land Studies project aimed at providing legal and managerial assistance to Indian Tribes. Professor Boyd is a member of the State Bar Committee which played a key role in the enactment of a revised garnishment statute.

Professor Ronald L. Cherry,
Director of the Law Library, continued his first-year legal bibliography class and assisted the training of first-year students on LEXIS and WESTLAW. In the spring he offered a three hour course on Issues in Law Librarianship in the Graduate Library School. In addition, he delivered lectures to other departments of the University including the College of Business and Public Administration. He served on the Executive Committee of the College, and has been active in the American Association of Law Libraries.
Professor Dan B. Dobbs has been doing sabbatical research this year. He has completed one lengthy article and amassed considerable data and other material during his sabbatical. He has undertaken to act as general editor for the supplement to Prosser & Keeton on Torts.

As a result of his sabbatical research, Professor Dobbs was the only professor appointed to the Ninth Circuit Committee on fee awards. Professor Dobbs is the chairperson of the Remedies Section of the AALS this year.

Associate Dean Mary Doyle completed a chapter of an EPA training manual examining how federal programs affect groundwater quality.

Dean Doyle's term as Director of the Central Arizona Water Conservation District (CAWCD) continued as did her appointment to the Governor's Commission on CAP Financing.

She was appointed by the Provost to serve on the University Committee on Public Policy which is charged with formulating and adapting public policy to changing conditions that challenge our university institution.

She taught Water Law in the fall semester and Property in the spring.

Effective June 1, Associate Dean Doyle became one of seven women deans in the country, becoming Dean of the University of Miami School of Law.
Professor August Eckhardt served as the University of Arizona representative on the faculty of the London Law Consortium program which was presented at the University of London during the fall semester, 1985. This program enables students in this Law College to study law in England for one semester.

Professor Eckhardt is working as a member of an Advisory Board created by the American Law Institute–American Bar Association Committee on Continuing Professional Education to oversee the development of a Model Bridge-the-Gap program, curriculum and materials.

During the spring semester, Professor Eckhardt supervised a seminar on the World Court. His future activities at the Law College will concentrate on World Peace Through Law providing opportunities for law students to study the role of international law, as contrasted with military force, in resolving international conflicts and in maintaining world peace.

Associate Professor Theresa Gabaldon, in her second year at the law school, taught Contracts, Legal Writing, Corporations and Current Business Problems. She served as a member of the Appointments Committee, and engaged in research on the implications of plaintiff conduct in establishing a private right of action under Rule 10b-5 of the Securities Exchange Act of 1934. She prepared an article, entitled Unclean Hands and Self-Inflicted Wounds: The Significance of Plaintiff Conduct in Actions for Misrepresentation Under Rule 10b-5, based on that research, and presented a seminar on the same topic.

Professor Glennon served on the Faculty Recruitment Committee, the Ad Hoc Committee on Academic Affairs, and the Publications Committee. He also served as advisor to the Arizona Law Review.

Professor Kenney Hegland's article on the much discussed Critical Legal Studies Movement, published this year in the U.S.C. Law Review, has been widely discussed and well received in the law school world. It is destined to become a classic in the jurisprudential debate over the role of rules in controlling judicial decisions. In another article completed this year, entitled "Quibbles", Professor Hegland calls into question a basic premise of the adversarial system. When published, it will surely trigger heated discussion on fundamental propositions.

The law and lawyers play a critical part in today's world, yet most layfolk have little knowledge in the area. Professor Hegland is designing an undergraduate course which presents the law as a humanity. Although there are undergraduate courses on specific substantive legal areas, such as Constitutional Law and Criminal Law, no course presents a general overview of the law and the profession. Professor Hegland plans to rectify this in The Law, the Method and the Profession, a set of course materials for undergraduates. The goal is to give the general liberal arts student a basic understanding of law and the legal profession, of what lawyers do, of how they go about doing it and of some of the ethical and jurisprudential quandries they face.
Professor Hegland continued his service on the important University Promotion and Tenure Committee. He also served on the Board of Directors of Legal Aid and was a trainer for a week long trial advocacy program for Legal Services lawyers. He also put on a half day training session on negotiation at a claims seminar sponsored by Mountain Bell.

In the law school world, he refereed an article for the Journal of Legal Education, wrote a client interviewing problem for Riskin's Dispute Resolution and Lawyers, and was an invited panelist at the annual meeting of the American Association of Law Schools meeting in New Orleans. He was recently named Acting Associate Dean.

Professor Roger Henderson was appointed Acting Vice Provost from August 15, 1985 through January 15, 1986. In addition to the daily affairs of the Provost's Office, he was asked to review and revise all the academic personnel policies of the University.

His article on admissibility of subsequent remedial measures and product liability suits (originally printed in the Nebraska Law Review) was reprinted in the 1985 Personal Injury Dest Book published by Matthew-Bender during the fall of 1985.

Professor Henderson was one of the principal speakers at the continuing legal education seminar sponsored by the American Bar Association Section on Judicial Administration in September in Santa Fe, New Mexico. His topic dealt with governmental and public official immunity.

In addition, Professor Henderson continued his work as Reporter for the Drafting Committee which is charged to revise certain aspects of the Uniform Rules of Evidence. He has completed the final draft of the proposed changes in the Uniform Rules of Evidence and the accompanying comments which will be presented to the Commissioners at their annual meeting in Boston in August 1986.

Professor Henderson was the Reporter and a member of the NCCUSL Committee that drafted the Model Act for Periodic Payment of Judgments. In addition, he has been asked to serve as a legal advisor to the American Tort Reform Association of Washington D.C.

Professor Henderson concluded his sixth and final year on the AALS Library Committee, the last three of which he served as chairman during which a complete review of the AALS Library accreditation standards was undertaken and completed.

President Koffler recently appointed him to the Campus AIDS Task Force, the purpose of which is to develop and refine appropriate campus guidelines on AIDS as new scientific information becomes available, and to review specific concerns which may develop about AIDS.

Lastly, Professor Henderson continues to serve on the University Committee on Academic Freedom and Tenure.
During the course of the year Professor Reka B. Hoff taught four 3-unit classes: Tax Policy (a starred seminar), Taxation of Transnational Transactions, Partnership Taxation, Law and Economics. The Tax Policy seminar is a new offering and produced a high level of student writing; one student paper won third prize in the writing competition sponsored by the American Journal of Tax Policy.

Professor Hoff currently is completing an article on the tax status of direct foreign investment in Arizona. She has commenced the research for a proposed article analyzing the balance and proportional distribution of the Arizona tax system.

At the College she is a member of the Executive Committee.

Professor Hoff is a member of the Board of Directors of Girls' Ranch of Arizona, a member of the Women's Studies Advisory Council of the University and a member of the League of Women Voters.

In the academic year 1985-1986, Professor Junius Hoffman taught Corporations in the fall semester and Securities Regulation in the spring semester. He has continued to spend time on organization of the State Bar project for revision of the Arizona Business Corporation Act. At the request of Judge William D. Browning, a local U.S. District Court Judge, most of his non-teaching and research time has been spent in being the Settlement Master in the Multidistrict Litigation involving the default of $2,250,000,000 principal amount of Washington Public Power Supply System Bonds. His role as Settlement Master is to expedite a settlement of the case involving perhaps 400,000 Bondholders and some 190 defendants. This has involved becoming familiar with a large number of constitutional, contract, and tort issues involved in the case, considering the merits of several complex securities issues and meeting with and taking the measure of the multitude of lawyers in the case.
Professor Boris Kozolchyk has been appointed by the American Bar Association to prepare the suggested text for revision of Article 5 of the Uniform Commercial Code. He published an article on the present state of letter of credit law in the George Mason University Law Review, Vol. 8, Spring 1986, No. 2.

He is also having published an article in the Tulane Law Review dealing with Transfer of Personal Property by a Non-Owner. This article was presented as a paper at a conference held in Tulane on the possible direction of the 21st Century Louisiana Civil Code.

Professor Kozolchyk is writing an article for the Banking Law Journal and continues to work on the second edition of his book on letters of credit.

Dean Paul Marcus completed the revision of his book, The Prosecution and Defense of Criminal Conspiracy Cases, and also completed an article dealing with joint criminal liability, published in the Journal of Comparative Law. As American Criminal Law Reporter, he delivered a talk on this topic in Sydney, Australia in August at the Congress of the International Academy of Comparative Law. He continued his work on a new book analyzing the law of entrapment. He completed an article for the Criminal Law Bulletin discussing trial procedure and the entrapment defense.

Dean Marcus continued to serve on three committees with members of the practicing bar and the judiciary: the Arizona Ad Hoc Task Force on Gender Discrimination and the Courts, the Governor's Advisory Council for the Prosecuting Attorneys of Arizona, and the Federal Judicial Conference Committee on Jury Instructions. The instructions for the Conference Committee have now been completed and will be published, in book form, later this year. He also served as a member of the ABA-AALS inspection team at the University of Pennsylvania College of Law and delivered the annual Enrichment Series Lecture in the fall at the University of Oklahoma School of Law.

Dean Marcus taught Criminal Procedure and Criminal Law and participated in the course in Law and Literature.
Professor Tom Mauet continues to teach in his areas of Criminal Procedure, Evidence, and Trial Practice courses. He has completed a second edition of his text called Fundamentals of Trial Techniques, as well as a second edition of a text called Materials in Trial Advocacy. Both are published by Little, Brown and Company. In addition, he is in the finishing stages of a text called Fundamentals of Litigation Techniques, which Little, Brown plans to publish later this year. With Dean Marcus, he continues as a co-reporter to the Federal Judicial Center’s Committee on Pattern Jury Instructions. Professor Mauet has also been active in outside teaching for other institutions as well as bar related activities. He taught at the Harvard Law School Trial Advocacy Workshop, with which he has been associated for several years. In addition he has taught for several trial advocacy programs conducted by the National Institute for Trial Advocacy. He also gave presentations before the State Bar’s Trial Practice Committee at its annual bar convention, and has spoken during the past year before the Pima County Bar.

Associate Professor James Ratner joined the faculty of the law school, teaching Contracts, Legal Writing and Antitrust. He served as a member of the Admissions Committee. He was also faculty advisor to the national moot court team, which competed successfully in regional competition and narrowly missed selection for final round competition, and to the second year moot court program. Professor Ratner is currently engaged in research concerning (1) the legality of monopoly pricing and control of “essential facilities” under the federal antitrust laws, and (2) the application of antitrust laws to recently deregulated transportation industries.
In January, Professor Andy Silverman was elected as president of the University chapter of the American Association of University Professors (AAUP) and re-elected for a third term as president of the Board of Directors of Southern Arizona Legal Aid. He is also serving a second year as treasurer of the University's Conflict Studies Committee, an inter-disciplinary group which studies and organizes events dealing with conflict resolution. He has been elected for the coming year as a member of the Faculty Senate and Board of Directors of the United Way of Greater Tucson.

Professor Silverman was selected to be a speaker in the University lecture series called Partners in Learning. The goal of the series is to bring together people from the University and community. His lecture, which was given in February, was entitled "Mexican Border: Barrier or Bridge."

The Minority Law Student Association awarded Professor Silverman its annual Community Service Award for 1986. The award was presented to him at the group's annual banquet in April.

He served as a trainer in the week-long trial advocacy services attorneys in December. Professor Silverman also made presentations in the area of immigration law to the judges and clerks of the U.S. District Court of Arizona and the attorneys in the Pima County Public Defender's Office.

Professor Thomas L. Schuessler chaired the Law College Executive Committee and served on the Status Committee during 1985-86. He also prepared a set of new teaching materials for his Civil Procedure and Research & Writing courses which will be used by his students next year. In addition Professor Schuessler substantially completed an article on the U.S. Supreme Court's approach to the law of personal jurisdiction which will be submitted for publication later this summer. Professor Schuessler continues to be active in providing service to several non-profit corporations in Tucson and in advising several University Departments on immigration matters regarding faculty members.
Professor Roy G. Spece, Jr. continued to work and publish in the areas of Law and Medicine, Law and Bioethics, and Constitutional Law. Professor Spece rewrote his book chapter, Forensic and Medicolegal Aspects of Transplantation, to reflect recent federal legislation in the area. The chapter will appear this summer in a book on anesthesia for cardiac surgery co-edited by Burnell Brown, Head of University Medical Center’s Anesthesia Department, and Dr. Jack Copeland, Chief of the Center’s Section of Cardiovascular and Cardiothoracic Surgery. Professor Spece revised his article, The Case Against Arizona Medical Malpractice Panels, to suit a national audience. It will appear this summer in a law and medicine symposium in Vol. 63, Issue 1 of the University of Detroit Law Review. Professor Spece prepared an abridged version of this article for the Arizona Bar, which was published in a special January issue of Summation, the Journal of the Arizona Trial Lawyers Association. Professor Spece's casebook, Law and Bioethics, continues to be used at many law schools throughout the country. This summer he prepared a supplement for the book.

Professor Spece spoke on recent medical-legal developments at a
